About us

The Lutheran World Federation (LWF) World Service Uganda Programme has a proven track record of 45 years of service in the realm of humanitarianism. Through our programs, we tirelessly serve the most vulnerable populations, extending timely, compassionate, and expert humanitarian aid to those in the most inaccessible regions. We strive to alleviate poverty, resettle those displaced due to insurgency, and elevate the standards of living of both refugees and Ugandans.

Okenyi Martin

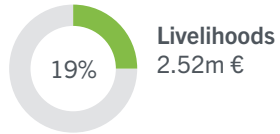

“We used to live amidst constant tension and conflict in our community. The allocation of small plots to refugees often ignited disputes over trivial matters. Something as simple as a child wandering into another family’s compound could escalate into a major conflict. However, thanks to celebrations like this for World Peace Day, and engaging youths as peace promoters, our community has undergone a remarkable transformation.

As a church leader in Palabek settlement, I am deeply grateful to LWF for their unwavering support and dedication to fostering peace and harmony in our community. Their interventions have not only helped alleviate tensions but have also brought families and communities closer together”.

The desperate fight for survival in refugee settlements often comes at a cost to the environment. With limited resources, displaced communities rely heavily on firewood for cooking, leading to deforestation and a vicious cycle of environmental degradation. But a simple solution is helping to break this cycle – the Lorena Stove. This simple, efficient stove uses less fuel than traditional methods, reducing the need to cut down trees and improving air quality. “Since we received training on how to construct Lorena stoves, we’ve noticed a significant reduction in firewood use,” says Gloria, “It’s making a big difference.” The cleaner burning process also cuts down on harmful smoke, creating healthier homes. “Children are no longer getting burnt due to open fire,” Gloria added. The Lorena Stove empowers communities to take charge of their environment and build a brighter future.
